

Dumbest Representation Money Can Buy

The late, great Sam Francis was never more insightful than when he described the Democrat Party as "evil," and the Republican Party as "stupid."

Conclusive proof of the latter lies in the fact that Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell is currently advising Republican Senators -- who are up for re-election -- to run FROM President Trump as a tactic to avoid losing their Senate seats. He actually believes that Trump is hurting their chances for re-election!

This was the same "brilliant" advice given to House Members in 2018 by former House Speaker, Paul Ryan, advice that precipitated a GOP loss of 42 House seats. That was the worst GOP defeat since the mid-term Congressional Elections in 1974, elections that took place during the highly-politicized Watergate investigation.

GOP Senators who are RINOs or sycophants for McConnell may be in trouble, but not because of their support for President Trump: they are in trouble for repeatedly defying President Trump and for heeding the advice of that chinless fool from Kentucky.

Joni Ernst in Iowa, Tom Tillis in North Carolina, Martha McSally in Arizona, Susan Collins in Maine, Corey Gardner in Colorado, and that tough=talking Lindsey Graham (RINO--SC) are all in re-election trouble to varying degrees.

Most have either been bought and paid for by K Street immigration lobbyists or the GOP's clueless large donors, and this fact has been painfully evident to their constituents back home. The financial seductions of K Street, the Chamber of Communists, or the Koch Family foundations have swayed their votes on many occasions, particularly when those votes involved immigration or other issues involving race.

In the final weeks of the 2020 campaign season -- as defeat concentrates their minds like a hangman's noose -- most of these disloyal and two-faced fools will beg President Trump to campaign for them in their home states, just as equally clueless House Members were compelled to do in 2018.

Being the team-player he is, President Trump will probably oblige, but it may be too late to save them from themselves and the terrible advice of Mitch McConnell.

The Gipper
Heaven