

Contract with America 2.0

by Earl P. Holt III

In a party with little reputation for smarts or courage, one of the wisest and most courageous things any Republican ever did was Newt Gingrich's "Contract with America" in 1994. Republican candidates who signed the Contract and vowed to follow its provisions helped elect a conservative GOP majority in the House for the first time since 1952.

Since then, the stupid party has shied away from the principled conservatism found in Gingrich's "Contract," and often allowed itself to be led astray by the seductions of K Street lobbyists, the GOP's Donor Class, and those empty suits who were primarily concerned with feathering their own nests. The latter's' style of leadership is best described as "tepid bipartisanship," and it helped to lose GOP House majorities in 2006 and 2018. In case you're wondering, I'm talking about guys like Paul Ryan and Mitch McConnell.

As the de facto leader of the Republican Party, President Trump should consider adopting or endorsing a second Contract with America. The mediocrity who now Chairs the Republican National Committee would never do so, but GOP voters must return to demanding that GOP candidates abide by such a statement of principles and not abandon them as so many RINOs have done in the past. That way voters should know exactly what they are getting with their vote.

Below, I have listed a few provisions with which most Republican voters would probably agree. Maybe this idea will catch on and voters in states that have likely experienced high levels of voter fraud -- like NH, MI, WI, PA, NC, VA, GA, AZ and NV -- will demand that their GOP Congressional candidates sign the pledge or pay a price for failing to do so:
