

Voter Fraud Bill

by Earl P. Holt III

By now, readers are probably familiar with the bill to make voter fraud permanent in American elections by over-riding state election laws. It federalizes the exact, same tactics the New Communist Party of the USA (NCPUSA) -- wrongly called "Democrats" -- used to steal the November 2020 Presidential Election.

I covered it pretty well in the Mid-Summer, 2021 issue of the INFORMER. (Earl Holt. "Institutionalizing Voter Fraud.") At the time, it was given the intentionally misleading name of the "For the People Act," but it has since been renamed the John Lewis Voting Rights Advancement Act.

The bill would legalize the very practices that permitted the theft of the 2020 Presidential Election by the NCPUSA. Among other provisions, the bill would outlaw state requirements for Photo I.D.s, it would permit states to expand the practice of mass-mailing Absentee Ballots, it would allow for election-day voter registration, it would legalize "vote harvesting" and it would prohibit states from comparing Voter Rolls with other states.

There was one feature of the bill I was unaware of at the time I reported on this scam: it was a specific provision that permitted voters to identify themselves to election officials with nothing more than a bill from a local utility company. Those who have never rented to nigras may be unaware of the purpose of this particular provision, but it is included solely to generate additional voter fraud.

I don't know how it's done elsewhere, but when establishing a new account with a utility company in St. Louis, all the tenant needed was a name and Social Security Number. Since most blacks have terrible credit histories after cheating everyone with whom they've ever done business -- including landlords and utilities -- they are often forced to illegally establish new accounts in the name of a minor child or relative who did not reside with them. It was that Social Security Number that was essential.

I'm sure there's an entire generation of blacks out there who discovered to their chagrin that they inherited horrible credit ratings based on bad debts actually incurred by a parent. When their utility bill grew so large from non-payment that the utility threatened to shut-off service, the parent simply moved away, presumably leaving a bad debt behind for the child to inherit someday. In my experience, this was a common practice.

Requiring only a utility bill as identification also allows others to vote with it, and merely exchanging utility bills amongst each other allows multiple individuals to vote more than once in every election with the same utility bill. The authors of the bill know this, and it's one of many reasons why we see "130 percent turnout" and duplicate votes in black areas or "ghettos," as we call them in the Ozarks.

Although it passed the House in March of 2021, the good news is that on January 19th of 2022, a slim majority of Senators refused to change the Senate's Rules and eliminate the filibuster, so the misnamed John Lewis Voting Rights Advancement Act never received a floor vote. Let's hope it's as dead as John Lewis, himself.
