

Origins of Black Gun Violence

Birmingham, Alabama experienced 142 murders in 2022, its highest total since 1933. In a typically futile gesture by black public officials, its transit authority has decorated a new fleet of Birmingham's buses with likenesses of the mothers of teenage murder victims, each pleading to end the violence. The artwork is to serve as a reminder to gangbangers not to kill each other so cavalierly.

Nearly a dozen mothers of teenage murder victims were present for the unveiling of the new buses, and many saw their likenesses reproduced on the sides of the new fleet. One mother was Sheree Kennon, whose son Detraio Whorton was murdered a year ago. Another was Wytangy Peake-Finney, whose son Calvin Foster was murdered in 2016.

Both Sheree Kennon and Wytangy Peak-Finney are members of What About Us, a support group for those who have lost children to violence. Other members of What About Us are Karen Nathan, who lost her son, Stanley Hopson in 2021, and Rose Johnson, who lost her son Del'Quan McNeily in 2020. In 2021, Kimyatta Henry also lost her son, Tyree Brown.

Alert readers may recognize in those last two paragraphs the true origins of black, teenage gun violence in America. It's NOT uncut weeds, broken windows, litter, structural racism, nor white supremacy. Nor is it "food deserts," or "heat islands," or "micro-aggressions," or the Second Amendment, or a lack of playgrounds. The ultimate source of black teenage gun violence is fatherless black males, or as they are more accurately characterized, BLACK BASTARDS.

There's an old joke about the social worker who was interviewing a black welfare mother with ten children. The social worker was astonished when the welfare momma told her that she had named all ten children "Leroy." The social worker then asks her how she addresses them when she wants to speak to them individually? The welfare momma replies, "Oh, I calls em by dey las' names: Dey alls gots differnt LAS' names."

Indiscriminate breeding by profoundly irresponsible black imbeciles has produced a Black Illegitimacy Rate above 90 percent in our large, urban areas, and approximately 80 percent nationwide. Most black, teenage males have little or no parental supervision and soon become skilled liars, adept at hiding their nefarious activities from often naive and gullible mothers. When they become too large or too strong for their mothers to discipline, they become defiant and often revert to the "law of the jungle."

The near absence of parental supervision facilitates an endless string of bad decisions, including drugs, gangs and guns. Armed black teenagers without supervision -- especially doltish ones -- makes for a dangerous and often tragic combination. It allows for their natural instincts of violence, savagery, witlessness and predation to manifest.
