

Fabricating Hate

It's become so difficult to find legitimate examples of overt hate in white America, many self-styled "victims" have resorted to falsifying "hate crimes" to keep their political agenda alive. (Jussie Smollett comes to mind.) At least once a week, some queer, nigra, Marxist Jew or circus freak is compelled to fabricate a "hate crime," knowing the Jew's Media will slavishly report it and never ask any hard questions.

The latest example comes courtesy of The College Fix, a courageous and honest student newspaper which reports these and other travesties that take place at America's so-called "institutions of higher learning." It seems that the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) had a queer student body president named David Spicer, who was recently removed from office and now faces a formal recall election because of his participation in a campus-wide hate crime hoax.

Fat, devious and queer

Spicer opposes MIT's new, faculty-approved "freedom of speech and expression" policy that permits even speech alleged to be offensive or "injurious" to others. As any self-righteous queer would do, Spicer chalked graffiti and hung posters with homophobic slurs around the MIT Campus to insult the LGBTQ+ community, and provoke them into joining him in opposing the new policy. 30 years ago, this would have been unheard of at MIT, but an institution that produced Sam Brinton -- "The Robin Hood of Women's Fashion" -- has clearly changed.

Spicer's peers and fellow queers in the LGBTQ+ community were offended and outraged, so few seemed willing to come to his defense. Apparently, the viciousness of the slurs found in his graffiti and posters exceeded any hate speech to which they'd been previously exposed, undermining Spicer's entire rationale. Many considered his actions rash and inappropriate, and one student described them as "vigilantism."

In an unapologetic defense of his own misdeeds, Spicer took the offensive -- as self-styled "victims" will often do -- by characterizing his efforts as an attempt to teach MIT's Administration a lesson regarding "the tax they impose on marginalized communities." (This is how the term chutzpah originated.)

David Spicer should consider foregoing his intended career in order to become a politician and member of the misnamed "Democrat" Party. He has already mastered phony victimhood, and his capacity to lie and willingness to engage in fraud definitely qualify him to run for public office as a "Democrat." He could be president some day...
