

A St. Louis Kwanzaa
(Kwanzaa begins Dec. 26th)

'Twas the night before Kwanzaa, and all through the hood,
The nigras were restless and up to no good.
Lookouts were perched at each corner with care,
To alert all the crack-dens if PO-lice came there.

Fumes of Mad Dog and weed wafted thick through the air,
While addicts shot smack, with nary a care.
Muggers all laced their Air Jordan's real tight,
In hopes a white victim might walk by that night.

The Crips and the Bloods made their holiday peace;
Vowing in common to "*F*ck the PO-lice.*"
Even the whiggers hid under their beds,
While visions of race riots danced in their heads.

In a crack-house, some scofflaws were lighting more rock,
When all of a sudden there came a loud knock.
Then what to their wondering eyes did appear,
But St. Louis' Finest, in full riot gear!

Doors tore from their hinges and crashed to the floor,
As miscreants screamed, terrified to their core.
The cops went to work with their nightsticks in hand,
Swinging at skulls as the criminals ran.

A beating ensued as they tried to escape,
And nobody got it on videotape!!!

A loud cry was heard by those able to flee:

"HAPPY KWANZAA YOU PUNKS, FROM THE SLPD!"
